When Stars are Scattered by Victoria Jamieson

Omar and his younger brother, Hassan, have spent most of their lives in Dadaab, a refugee camp in Kenya. Life is hard there: never enough food, achingly dull, and without access to the medical care Omar knows his nonverbal brother needs. So when Omar has the opportunity to go to school, he knows it might be a chance to change their future . . . but it would also mean leaving his brother, the only family member he has left, every day. Heartbreak, hope, and gentle humour exist together in this graphic novel about a childhood spent waiting, and a young man who is able to create a sense of family and home in the most difficult of settings.

I Survived the Sinking of the Titanic

Pizazz is a superhero, but she hates her superpower. In fact, she hates it so much that sometimes she'd rather let the baddies win than have to use it. Compared with her superhero family, Pizazz would just much rather eat ice cream and play with her hamsters.

Yet when Pizazz becomes an eco-monitor at school, she finds out that a local business – run by the dad of one of her enemies – is planning to steamroller the nice local park and build a car park on it. Despite a disastrous initial presentation to the rather intimidating businessmen with her friend Ivy, Pizazz's Grampa helps them hatch a plan which will bring the community together to protest the new car park – and, in so doing, provide an opportunity for Pizazz to use her actually quite fabulous superpower.
